FIRE AND PHOENIX

By Kate Glover

The play opens in the bakery of Thomas Farynor, Kings Baker, just before midnight on 1st September 1666.

Thomas assures his daughter that he has checked the fires...
The Fire starts within hours; We follow Thomas and his daughter and others as they flee, homeless, from a raging inferno, driven by a ferocious East wind. Samuel Pepys witnesses and records the horror. The people lose everything and camp out at Moorfields. Foreigners and "papists" are blamed for the fire and so are ferociously attacked. People are hysterical.

St Pauls burns: a vision of Hell.

A Frenchman is hanged for starting the Fire but was he really guilty? What about Farynor? Pepys has his suspicions...

And is there any hope?
